

I consider any unwanted telemarketing calls an invasion of my privacy. Working 60-80 hours a week leaves me very little time to enjoy my family hours and therefore these are extremely important to me. To be called during dinner hours by any telemarketers is unwanted. To overturn our State of Wisconsin Law which has been supported by over 80% of our population seems to violate the true meaning of democracy.

Many of the banks that call have been previous holders of credit cards. The fact that I have terminated that relationship is usually secondary to their business practices. To subject me to their incessant phone calls is absurd since I have already expressed my desires by terminating that relationship. I strongly urge you to uphold Wisconsin's No Call List law. The banking community must be informed that the citizens have already spoken. If the law is overturned and calls are resumed, I will personally cancel every credit card and account that I have with any bank that calls. In the long run the banking industry will be undermining their own business by trying to overturn the will of their consumers.
